ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE

NEW RESIDENCE UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Pictured above is the artist's drawing of Elmsley Hall, a new residence now under construction and scheduled for completion before September, 1957. The building will house 200 students on the top four floors with sundry functional rooms on the first floor. The wing on the northeast will house the Treasurer's offices on the north side and a beautiful common room facing south with guest rooms on the second floor. The landscaped plot of ground in the center of the sketch is presently occupied by Elmsley House.

At right is a picture of the state of progress of the construction on December 31, 1956. Frank Brennan, Toronto, is the architect and Dalton Construction Co. are the builders.

Members of the famous class of 1925 collaborate in laying the corner-stone of the Sudbury Memorial Hospital: Hon. Paul Martin, Minister of Health and Welfare, and W. Leo Knowlton, General Manager, Canada Permanent Trust Co., and Director of J. Mason Foundation.

BEST COLLEGIATE PASSER IN HIS DAY

Reprint from Eastman Kodak Company Newspaper, Kodakery.

Toronto sportswriters are still writing about Hugh Marks, 19 years after the H-E athlete starred in football and basketball for St. Michael's College and the University of Toronto. A clipping from the Toronto Telegram which recently reached the KODAKERY sports desk says in part, "The forward passing of this newest gridiron great reminds us of a large-handed young gent named Hughie (Hands) Marks who could throw with the best of all time."

Marks, it turns out, set records that still stand in Canadian football while matriculating at Dominion schools. The all-Canadian quarter-back tossed 27 passes in one game, completing 16 of them. Believe it or not, five consecutive passes resulted in touchdowns! That feat seems good enough for anyone's record book.

In another game Marks completed 4 for 5 averaging 55 yards per completed pass. This outstanding performance alerted Canadian scribes and prompted them to grind out reams of copy for the major dailies and national slick publications.

One internationally known columnist devoted a profusely illustrated quarter-page article comparing Marks to such illustrious figures as Babe Ruth, Charlie Conacher, Fred Perry and Max Baer. Throughout his college days he was referred to as "Hands" by the press, and one widely circulated story insisted that "he is without a doubt the most reliable and accurate passer in the game today."

The Canadian edition of the now-defunct Liberty magazine, upon selecting him on its all-star team, said, "He had such a remarkable average for successful forward flings that some of his opponents have even complained to officials that Marks was using the spitter."

"Macleans," another Canadian national publication, devoted considerable verbiage to Marks' "efficient and spectacular brand of play."

In tracing his 1932-36 college athletic career, one naturally turns to Marks himself as the most accurate source of information. Normally an easy-to-talk-to guy, he insists, "I was throwing to Joe Connelly, the greatest receiver in the business. That's about all there is to the story."

"Another point—both Connelly and myself were fortunate to have Johnny Sullivan as our coach while playing together at Aquinas." Sullivan is a member of H-E Dept. 31 and assists with football coaching duties at the U. of R.
